Course Overview

Foundation classes are just introductory trainings, NOT a full technical training. Compromise isn't inevitable, or, at least, it shouldn't be. Traditional endpoint protection simply cannot keep up with the rapidly evolving threat landscape, leaving organizations vulnerable to advanced attacks. A new approach is needed, one that can rebuild confidence in endpoint security. This new approach needs to prevent advanced attacks originating from executables, data files or network-based exploits known and unknown before any malicious activity could successfully run. Palo Alto Networks® call this advanced endpoint protection. By focusing on the attacker's core techniques and putting up barriers to mitigate them, the attacker's path for exploitation becomes known, even when the attack isn't. Traps focuses on the core techniques leveraged by exploits in advanced cyberattacks and renders these techniques ineffective by breaking the exploit sequence and blocking the technique the moment it is attempted.
